Breast cancer and breast infection: a new challenge for breast cancer diagnosis. We report a case of a 66-year-old woman affected by a breast mass that was correctly diagnosed by ultrasound as a benign cyst. Subsequent biopsy revealed a breast ductal carcinoma in situ. As a consequence of the mammary duct ductal carcinoma in situ, the patient underwent mastectomy and displayed distant metastasis in the liver. Although rare, breast cancer should be considered in cases of patients with painful breast lumps and with a positive result for "bacterial" pathogens in the blood. Only a histological examination will finally solve the question, as mammary lesions are usually not the cause of such symptoms.Pushing the boundaries of biology, researchers have discovered that two proteins in human cells can convert magnetic energy into light-based energy. Previously, scientists have shown that they could transform magnetic energy into heat energy via a process called "magneto-caloric effect." However, the new study has shown that this "magneto-caloric effect" is more than just a product of heat and can be transformed into visible light. The two proteins that the study used to make the conversion from magnetic energy to light are found in mitochondria, the energy-generating centers of cells. They are known as ATP synthase. The result of this study may represent the first successful example of the use of a natural system to generate electricity from magnetic fields. Results of the study were published online Sept. 16 in the journal Chemistry. The study was led by Eitan Kolahdooz, a professor of chemistry and biophysics at the Jacobs School of Music, along with researchers in the new institute he and colleagues formed in early 2017, the Jacobs School of Engineering of the University at Buffalo. In working on their new institute, Kolahdoo

The front end is sharper, the redone interior spacious and the chassis stiff and better than ever. It’s also the car’s most efficient model with best fuel-economy rating of 23/28 mpg city/highway, significantly better than the 16/20. If you want a roomy hatchback that’s still not quite a minivan, but offers more choice than a low-volume economy car, the Aveo is the way to go. Chevy had in its sights the family hauler with up to five adults. And it’s got the Chevy’s market-leading safety scores to back up its claim. So the new 2012 Aveo is a little more of everything than it used to be, and that’s just fine. For 2011, the mid-size Aveo has shed nearly 400 pounds from its old, wide-bodied girth. The reshaped body is 1.3 inches narrower, which helps improve the handling. That’s the biggest change in exterior styling. The interior has been tweaked, too, for a more spacious feel and a lower, thicker dash. These changes make a bigger place to live. If you want an Aveo with a smooth ride, the new model has the old-school suspension tuned for a firmer ride. The car is rated for a higher maximum adult-occupant weight limit of 3,000 pounds than the current 2,600-pound total. Chevy has spruced up the engine line, too. The new entry-level 1.4-liter four-cylinder engine puts out 142 horsepower and 136 pound-feet of torque on regular unleaded. That’s more than double the previous level’s output. The second-step 2.0-liter four has 151 hp and 144 pound-feet. A V-6 with 184 hp and 162 lb-ft of torque is standard. Then there’s a new 2.4-liter four with 179 hp and 162 lb-ft, a 1.6-liter turbo

Let $\textbf{F}:\mathbb{R}^3 \to \mathbb{R}^3$ be a vector field that we want to show is conservative, that is, its curl is zero. Firstly, what would be the representation of a vector field? My attempt would be: $$ \textbf{F}(x, y, z) = F_1(x, y, z)\textbf{i} + F_2(x, y, z)\textbf{j} + F_3(x, y, z)\textbf{k} $$ And since the curl is given by: $$ \operatorname{curl}\textbf{F} = \operatorname{curl}(F_1 \textbf{i} + F_2 \textbf{j} + F_3 \textbf{k}) = \operatorname{curl}(F_1 \textbf{i} + F_2 \textbf{j} + F_3 \textbf{k}) = \operatorname{curl}(F_1 \textbf{i}) + \operatorname{curl}(F_2 \textbf{j}) + \operatorname{curl}(F_3 \textbf{k}) = 0 $$ Is it correct? A: Yes, you're good. That's how you'd represent a vector field. You're not wrong. Your curl calculation is correct. However, $\oper
