The most popular and versatile RAW-to-JPEG image editor is now faster than ever, and gives users the ability to creatively control the results of their color adjustments. And with Advanced content-aware tools, users can preview and correct their photo corrections with the click of a button.

The good news for web designers Photoshop is that it has introduced Photoshop on the web. The images are hosted on the exclusive Adobe Cloud and you can upload your images, trim or crop them and then use the “Free” editing functions that Adobe has equipped to create web-ready images. There is no limit to the amount of times you can change your settings and create new files. You can share these files with your friends and family online any time the software is updated. It’s quick and easy, you can print images directly from Adobe Creative Cloud to any compatible printer (including the Webjet inkjet printer range) and you can even use Adobe Photoshop CC in any web browser anywhere in the world - ensuring you always have the best possible results for your work. The most important Adobe Photoshop update of the year has certainly been the introduction of the file format, PSD. In the past, designers used to save their files in a compressed file format that was only 20% of the size of the original file. Adobe decided to challenge its Worldwide Leading position by introducing a standard file format that remains compatible with other than Photoshop and Adobe Photoshop and Photoshop Elements. With the introduction of this new file format, designers have the opportunity to save their images in the PSD format and later share them with their colleagues and friends.
