Peyton Manning will be returning to the NFL. Although we all are aware of the prevailing thought that he will be back with the Denver Broncos after two of his stints with the Indianapolis Colts, he was recently asked about potentially signing with a different team, and he outright said he would not return to the Broncos. According to Maria Taylor of the Denver Post, "Peyton Manning says he wants to be a starting quarterback next season — and that it's not 'a lock' that he'll return to the Denver Broncos. "It's no secret I'm the QB of the Denver Broncos," Manning said in an interview with the New York Post. "I've got a good team around me. It's no secret I love the Broncos. But that's not a lock. There's a lot to be determined in the next eight weeks." Manning has spent his entire career with the Broncos and hasn't indicated that it will be his last season. However, it is interesting that he says he isn't locking in as a starter next season. He was an extremely good starter for the Broncos, but clearly they want to have a better chance of reaching the playoffs next season. Manning also says in the same interview that he believes the Broncos will get back to the Super Bowl next season. Manning makes a good point in saying that just because he says they will get back to the Super Bowl next season, doesn't mean that they actually will. He states that he wants them to win the Super Bowl first
