And so the drama continues with the warzone legend being accused of cheating by YouTuber BadBoyBeaman. ZLaner decided to prove the YouTuber wrong using a camera trick involving an eye tracker. He also gave BadBoyBeaman a hard deadline of 3 months to get over his worries. Even after 3 months, ZLaner was still unsure if his former rival was actually cheating. Recently, ZLaner has decided to ban BadBoyBeaman for his hacking allegations and the amount of time it takes to prove he is innocent. I have no doubt that the situation would be exaggerated, but if you look at some of the footage on the stream, there's definitely been instances where BadBoyBeaman has claimed he has hacked or used a gamebreaking exploit. Just look at his response on the thread from earlier on But, it doesn't stop there: The streamer's latest Tweet says that he would prefer to "square up" BadBoyBeaman rather than come face-to-face with him. This is where all of this, frankly, gets a bit nuts. Do you think ZLaner might be planning to use surprise, perhaps? So why should BadBoyBeaman take ZLaner up on his offer? Well, if he turns on Shifty, then he won't be able to defend himself, so Shifty can then lock him up, and keep going on with his attempts to destroy him online. How to hack an entire subreddit and r/colonyofbadboy Beaman claims is a pretty simple task. He suggests that Redditors use a hex editor, an ASCII editor or an application like Scratchbox to change the background of the subreddit. Once the background is changed, it's pretty easy to set up different user accounts, which include a signature. Users can then upload images that have been altered with a photo editor. This is then posted in its own subreddit, where other users can vote up or down based on whether they agree with a user or comment.
