Search form Hill seeks spending deal to avert shutdown WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid said Monday he will work to reach a budget deal before the budget spending deadline on Sept. 30 and described the clash as the most fundamental challenge facing his party. "It's a battle between Republicans who want to protect tax breaks for the wealthiest Americans and middle-class families and Democrats who want to extend those tax breaks for middle-class families while extending unemployment benefits for the millions of Americans who are out of work," Reid said. Reid acknowledged that the chances of a compromise on the fiscal issues before Congress are "getting slimmer" but said the only way out of the impasse is for all of the parties involved to reach an agreement. "Unfortunately, the president and Republicans have not been willing to compromise. The problem is they only want to talk about spending cuts, while we want to see more revenue," Reid said. House Republicans voted Monday to cut off talks with Democrats until after the election, a tactic aimed at forcing Reid to fund the government on budget issues alone without White House involvement. They warned that Reid's proposals would increase the deficit by $32 billion over the next decade. "They are actively seeking to force a government shutdown," said House Republican leader John Boehner, Ohio, in a statement. A government shutdown would occur if Congress does not raise the statutory limit on federal spending by Oct. 1. The limit is a complicated formula that includes spending levels established by the last two budgets — Democrats took control of Congress in January 2009 and cut spending in the 2009 budget year and Republicans took control of the House in January 2011 and have focused on cuts to entitlements. Congress has until Oct. 1 to pass a new budget resolution, which would allow the appropriations process to continue on an annual basis. The current budget is on pace to be the fifth straight to run into a partial shutdown, which began March 1 and has been resolved only twice before, according to the Associated Press. The last government shutdown was in 1996 and went on for 13 days. If a shutdown does occur, it could be the third in less than two years. More than 30,000 federal workers would be furloughed and other workers would be sent home.
