Basically, I want to do this: python myscript.py "mylib" And the script will use the module "mylib" as if the module was imported using import mylib I've been thinking of a way to do this, but I don't know how to proceed. Any suggestions? A: You need to parse the args before doing anything. Then, when you import, add the arguments to sys.argv[1:]: import sys #... # Wherever you're starting the script # ^ # | # | # v args = sys.argv[1:] # Only the arguments after the script name # Do stuff, for example: import mylib # Now, sys.argv is ['myscript.py','mylib'] # Or do more stuff: import sys args = sys.argv[1:] # Only the arguments after the script name sys.argv.insert(0, '--',
