"I was skeptical at first when I saw this offer, but the response I received from Booksitter was outstanding. First of all, I received the proofing instantly, and the error(s) were corrected in a matter of minutes. Secondly, the package arrived as promised. The best part is that the purchase, printing and shipping all came for a single flat fee." -- G.C., Utah

You are here Judge's Sentencing of Nijhawan Held 'Constitutionally Unreasonable' (AER) - The Supreme Court's denial of the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals' emergency petition for rehearing (No. 12-10019) and Ninth Circuit's stay of the court's stay-and-release order (No. 12-10020) is a victory for the U.S. government. We are pleased with the Supreme Court's decision and are grateful to all those who worked so hard to ensure that this dangerous prisoner remained locked up. In 2012, the Ninth Circuit court issued an emergency stay-and-release order based on the court's erroneous finding that we lacked authority to detain Nijhawan on immigration charges. An immigration detainer is a request from the United States government to local law enforcement to hold the subject of an immigration detainer and transfer custody for federal immigration purposes. Nijhawan was in the custody of U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) on criminal charges, and a detainer had been issued for his immigration arrest and detention. On July 13, 2012, the U.S. Supreme Court granted the government's petition to appeal, and on August 4, 2013, the Ninth Circuit affirmed Nijhawan's conviction and sentence and stayed the release order. When the Ninth Circuit issued its emergency stay-and-release order, the government promptly sought a stay and challenge from the
