Duplicate Photo Finder is a straightforward application that targets users in need of a quick and effortless way to detect duplicate images in one or multiple folders. If you have large picture collections spread across the computer and want to clean up clones of the same image, Duplicate Photo Finder will do its best to help you deal with such content. It comes wrapped inside an appealing interface that remains intuitive throughout your whole experience with it. The feature set is encased in a few small buttons that will help you to manipulate the data seamlessly. Before you initiate any sort of operation, we recommend you make a quick stop to the Options section, where you can define the list of image formats you desire to include in the search process. The program is able to work with the following: BMP, JPG, GIF, PNG and TIFF, while allowing you to select the deletion method and here, you have two options: move the files to the Recycle Bin or delete them without confirmation. There's also the possibility to set the application to search only for 100% identical pictures. The folders you want to include in the scan process can be added to the list by drag and drop or using the dedicated built-in commands. As soon as you launch the search operation, the program starts looking for duplicate content, displaying statistics related to the number of processed files and elapsed time. Once the scan comes to an end, Duplicate Photo Finder shows the results in a list, which can be navigated with the mouse or via the up and down arrows on your keyboard. Moreover, the preview function allows you to view the original image against the duplicate one, indicating the level of similarity found for the current photo. Overall, Duplicate Photo Finder does accomplish the task, but could use support for a wider array of formats and more advanced search filters. However, we cannot deny its efficiency.
