It's capable of processing only one file at a time, and it may take several seconds to convert large libraries. However, you can change iTunes behavior in Windows and easily manage a large number of MP3 files. How to Change iTunes Behavior iTunes has a built-in option that prevents conversion of large music libraries. To change this behavior, open the options and set iTunes to prevent auto conversion. Open iTunes preferences and select General. Go to the Auto-Convert Items checkbox and click the box to disable it. Add files to the list of files that are not automatically converted. Set iTunes to prevent the conversion of any file not listed

There are two ways that I use this macro. 1. Most of the time I use it in the Visual Basic Script Editor of the PStricks script to convert the script output into a picture format which I can use in other programs. 2. If I can do this without the PStricks script, then I can use it in my applications to convert the script output to a picture. 3. First I use the In Range of my script to determine the exact number of characters in the string to be converted. 4. Then I use the Clip of my script to remove any characters that are outside the range. 5. Then I use the Center of my script to put the text at the center of the picture. 6. When I need to, I can create a sub-macro that will run the script, and I will just need to change the name of the picture file so that it will be converted to a new name. 7. Since the "MSIE" attribute will be at the bottom of the list. 8. I just have to change the "MSIE" attribute to the file name of my choice.
