It involves pathogen recognition by pattern recognition receptors (PRRs) present on host cells and the activation of an intracellular signaling cascade. A wide array of PRRs that recognize pathogen-associated molecular patterns (PAMPs) have been identified. Receptors for bacterial components include Toll-like receptors (TLRs), nucleotide oligomerization domain (NOD)-like receptors, and receptor for advanced glycation endproducts (RAGE). TLRs recognize viral proteins and bacterial lipoproteins (TLR2), double-stranded DNA (TLR3 and TLR9), and single-stranded RNA (TLR7 and TLR8). RAGE binds to amyloid- $\beta$  and ligands for TLR2, TLR4, TLR6, and TLR9. NOD1 and NOD2 respond to bacterial peptidoglycan and NOD2 ligand has been identified. The intracellular signaling cascade culminates in activation of the transcription factor NF-kappa B and mitogen-activated protein kinases. Viruses inhibit innate immune responses by manipulating intracellular signaling cascades. For example, Herpes simplex virus (HSV) blocks the activation of NF-kappa B and interferon-stimulated genes by virally encoded ICP27. Influenza virus induces degradation of the NF-kappa B-inducing kinase (NIK) and the IkappaB kinase (IKK) complex, preventing their activation by TLR ligands. Vesicular stomatitis virus (VSV) blocks NF-kappa B activation by inhibiting TNF-alpha-induced IkappaB kinase activation. Herpes simplex virus type 2 (HSV-2) has a unique mechanism of inhibiting NF-kappa B. HSV-2 infection causes degradation of the p65 subunit of NF-kappa B. This subunit is f988f36e3a
