The report from the Observatory of Social Affairs and Health estimates that the cost of free services would be almost €20 billion in 2010 and €23 billion in 2012. It suggests a number of reforms to be implemented in order to try to cut costs and boost the efficiency of the public sector health care system. In order to provide free health care to more of its population, France must adopt an approach that ensures services are in line with cost efficiency and quality criteria, instead of free care being "a benefit that is made compulsory by the state. • f988f36e3a
